The brain is the most complex structure in the Universe, and neurologists must puzzle out life-changing diagnoses from the tiniest of clues. In this talk, Suzanne O'Sullivan will follow the trail of her patients' symptoms: feelings of déjà vu lead us to a damaged hippocampus; spitting and fidgeting

The mystery and insight is because the patient ailments are in the brain, often epilepsy. Reading these stories helps me understand how central our brains are to all we do and are. And it helps appreciate how shocks to the brain can produce unanticipated consequences. Although it's subtitled "Detective Stories From the World of Neurology", Suzanne O'Sullivan's new book, Brainstorm, is really a series of case studies of epilepsy.

I was reminded of my lucid dream by the story of Donal, one of the patients featured in Brainstorm, Suzanne O'Sullivan's new book of "detective stories from the world of neurology". For 30 years...

Brainstorm examines the stories of people whose symptoms are so strange even their doctor struggles to know how to solve them. A man who sees cartoon characters running across the room; a teenager who one day arrives home with inexplicably torn clothes; a girl whose world turns all Alice in Wonderland; another who transforms into a ragdoll whenever she even thinks about moving.
