Louise Berlay (Author of Magic of the Mind)

One of the greatest mysteries of our mental faculties is that of our subconscious mind. As our awareness is outwardly focused, it has no perception of its interacting counterpart functioning below the threshold of its horizon. Conjointly, conscious and subconscious form a single, unified faculty: our mind.

The laws of the mind are as precise and dependable as those of mathematics or gravity. So until each aspect of this governing law is met, there can be no fulfillment of our desire. As taught by the wisest of men, "belief" is surely the greatest activator of the creative process.
