Gathering to create art, we enter our sanctuary, our safe haven, our personal space. Here we can say whatever is on our mind and what matters most to us, as we imagine our world of love. First of all, gathering to create art means saying 'No' to something else that would have filled the day.

The Art of Gathering by Priya Parker — The Every Space

In The Art of Gathering, Priya Parker gets to the heart of these questions and reveals how to design a transformative gathering. An expert on organizing successful gatherings whether in conference centres or her living room, Parker shows us how to create moving, magical, mind-changing experiences - even in spaces where we've come to expect little.

In her new book, The Art of Gathering, she takes the stance that our gatherings thus far have lacked lustre, and presents her shiny 2.0 edition. Endorsed by Deepak Chopra, Parker's human-centred approach comes in eight easy steps—and includes provocative and cheeky pointers such as “Don't Be A Chill Host” and “Cause Good Controversy”.

Implement at least 1 rule that enforces the gathering's purpose. Exercise 3. Like all good stories, memorable gatherings start and end with a bang. Start your gathering off by priming, ushering and launching. Your gathering begins at the moment your guests first learn of it, not at the actual event.

One of your signatures is the dinner held the night before the primary event. How does time and the temporal figure into the art of gathering? I believe every gathering contains the opportunity to create a temporary alternative world for those who enter it. And one of the ways to do that is to think like a game designer and create temporary rules.
