The War Diary of Clare Gass by Clare Gass, Paperback ...

The War Diary of Clare Gass is part of the Hannah Institute's Studies in the History of Medicine, but is also an important addition to Canadian military and women's history. This is a valuable document for anyone interested in responses to the First World War.

The War Diary of Clare Gass documents her daily experiences, from the beginning of her military training in 1915 to her return from Europe in 1918. Gass records the sights and sounds and smells of war as well as quoting the then-unknown "In Flanders' Fields," written by her colleague Dr John McCrae.

One cannot come away from reading these books without a strong impression of how horrible war can be. We expect a diary to be a daily record, especially a personal record of events, experiences, and observations. If we are lucky, a diary might also offer insights into the character and personality of the writer.
